

BOOKMARKING RELAXATION

How to Instantly Relax Amidst Complete Chaos

A Part of the Higher Self Guides
Library Collection
By Matthew Joyce

© 2007 by Matthew Joyce. All Rights Reserved. Published by Higher Self Guides, LLC.

No part of this publication may be reproduced or distributed in any form or by any means, or stored in a database or retrieval system without the prior written permission of Higher Self Guides, LLC.

The author and publisher have used their best efforts in preparing this book and the document contained herein. However, the author and publisher make no warranties of any kind, express or implied, with regard to the informational content, documentation, or files contained in this book or in any accompanying media files such as MP3s, CDs or DVDs, and specifically disclaim, without limitation, any implied warranties of merchantability and fitness for a particular purpose, with respect to program listings in the book, the techniques described in the book, and/or the use of files. In no event shall the author or publisher be responsible or liable for loss of profit, or any commercial damages, including, but not limited to, special incidental, consequential, or any other damages in connection with or arising out of furnishing, performance, or use of this book, program files, instruction, audio or video connected with this information.

Further, the author and publisher have used their best efforts to proof and confirm the content of the files, but you should proof and confirm information such as dates, measurements, and any other content for yourself. The author and publisher make no warranties of any kind, express or implied, with regard to that content or its accuracy.

For more information, please contact:

Higher Self Guides, LLC
PO Box 21151
Boulder, CO 80308 USA
303-539-9310
matthew@higherselfguides.com
www.higherselfguides.com

Tired of feeling stressed?

Learn How to Take Five with a Single Breath!

---

I magine that you're running late for an important appointment.

On the way out the door you accidentally spill something on your pants. The stain is embarrassing. You glance at your watch and sigh. Then you turn around and change your clothes.

Once in the car, you turn the key. The ignition cranks, but the engine doesn't start. You gulp and try again. Still nothing. "Not now!" you plead.

Finally the car starts and you merge into traffic. But it's barely moving. There's road construction and the flag man is waving people through in small groups. You squeeze the steering wheel and wait your turn with growing impatience. The meeting is going to start soon.

After three incredibly long red lights and half a mile behind a slow driver your blood is beginning to simmer. By the time you get to the parking lot you're tense beyond reason. Your jaw feels tight, your shoulders are hunched, and you're starting to get a headache.

You rush up the stairs and stand outside the door. On the other side is the opportunity you've been waiting for.

You need to relax. Right now. But how?

With a single breath.

The mere act of deliberately breathing in and out can be enough to shift from one state of being to another. From tension to relaxation. If you know how.

The trouble is most people never learned how. Growing up, we spend time memorizing facts about subjects like math, geography, and history. We learn procedures like long division and the scientific method, and practical skills such as balancing a checkbook or driving a car. All of these help us to lead happier and more productive lives. Yet, curiously, few of us ever studied anything to help us actually live more enjoyable lives.

Imagine how it would have helped you if your physical education class had taught you not only how to strengthen your body, but also how to relax. Not just stretching, but true full-body relaxation. Imagine your gym teacher had taught you how to memorize that feeling in the same way your math teacher taught you how to memorize the multiplication tables.

---

Think what your life would be like if:

- Recognizing your propensity to stare out the window during her lectures, your Social Studies teacher had taught you how to stay focused in the present moment.
- Your English teacher taught you the life-altering power of an I Am statement.
- Your Art teacher showed you how to access your own perpetual source of creativity.
- Your Biology teacher explained how to use your mind to improve your health.
- Your Guidance counselor trained you how to consult your own inner voice for guidance in any given moment.

These are the types of abilities that this report and others in the Higher Self Guides library will teach you. You can think of them as resource guides that fill in the gaps overlooked by many educational systems. We provide free articles like this one to speed you on your way, plus advanced materials for those eager to master more complex practices like discharging emotional situations, manifesting health and wealth, and accessing guidance. When you want to ask detailed questions about implementing these skills you can always join our online members' forum at the SagesTeaHouse.com. To learn more about the resources available to you turn to page 10.

In this report you'll not only learn how to relax with a single breath, you'll also learn how to memorize and recall an experience—any experience. You can use the same technique to instantly feel alert, poised, or sleepy. How you apply the lesson depends only on your imagination.

Yet it isn't a magic trick. You'll find it takes practice to bring about instant recall. But you had to study in school too, right? So get ready to learn a life-changing skill and prepare to do some homework.

You'll use the ideas in this report far more often than you've ever needed to use the date of the signing of the Magna Carta, or the name of the capitol of Tanzania. Best of all, the results are ones you'll enjoy using right now and for the rest of your life.

Turn the page and let's get started.

Many Blessings,

Matthew

Matthew Joyce
Boulder, Colorado, USA

P.S. If you enjoy this report, you can enjoy similar articles each month with our free newsletter, filled with stories and practical advice to ease your journey through a world of joyous creation.

Have you ever wished you could relax at will?

You can. In the time it takes to breathe in and out, you can shift your experience from great tension to total relaxation.

Learning how to relax on command is a bit like setting a bookmark or favorite in your web browser. The first time you're looking for information on the Internet you may use a search engine to find a web site that meets your needs. You sift through the search results, go to the site, read the page, and follow the links until you eventually find the exact information you're looking for. Fortunately you only need to do it once. If you want to reach that page again you can simply set a bookmark that will take you straight back to it without the hassle you went through the first time.

You can do the same thing with the feeling of being relaxed.

You're Doing It Already

You make mental bookmarks all the time, although you may not have realized you were doing so. To see what I mean, take this a little quiz:

2 + 2 = _____

My telephone number is _____

The answers these questions are likely so basic you don't have to think about them. They're facts that you've committed to memory, and they're now available with instant recall. These are bookmarked facts and figures.

Of course, you don't just bookmark pieces of information. You also memorize body movements by practicing them over and over again until they're fluid and can be largely done without thinking.

For instance, imagine for a moment that you're tying your shoes. Reach out to your foot and grab the imaginary shoe laces. Then move your hands as if you were tying the knot. More than likely these are well-practiced moves.

Or imagine you're brushing your teeth. Open your mouth and move your hand accordingly. More than likely when you put your toothbrush in your mouth you start brushing in the same place and follow the same sequence out of habit.

Learning how to relax on command is like setting a bookmark in your web browser. You only need to do the hard work once. After that, it's a matter of recalling the feeling.

*Actors memorize feelings all the time.
So can you.*

These are movements that you've been doing for so long you scarcely need to think about them.

The same process of memorization is used in sports for movements like a golf swing, and in music when you practice a song, repeatedly playing the same notes and chords until the movements feel smooth and easy.

Now imagine you're a pizza chef kneading the dough and tossing it high in the air. You twirl the pizza, and it gets thinner and larger with each twirl. Can't do that one so well? If not, it's because you haven't practiced the moves. Yet with enough time and training you can probably toss pizza dough with the best of them.

That's what mental bookmarking is all about. But instead of practicing facts and figures or movements, you memorize the experience of having a feeling.

"Can't memorize a feeling," you say. Think they happen spontaneously?

Well, feelings do arise quickly and seemingly of their own volition, but that doesn't mean you can't control them and bring them about at will. Think about movie actors. They need to cry and express other emotions on demand. Not just once, but sometimes repeatedly until the director is satisfied with the scene.

I'll Have What She's Having

Even if you're not an actor chances are you've already used a process similar to the one they use. It starts with the basic act of memory. Perhaps you've reminisced about a favorite moment with a friend or recounted the travails of an adventure gone awry. In this case you simply take things a step further and recall the feelings associated with that event.

To understand the process, start by thinking of an especially vivid moment in your life. Recall the experience with as much imagery as you can possibly associate with it. Try to remember enough detail that you can walk through the event in your mind. Recall the setting and the scenery, including the people, things, and activities around you. Remember the light, the noises, the temperature. Now recall any thoughts you might have had at the time. What were your emotions? How did your body feel? Concentrate on the sensations you felt within your body at that moment.

For example, let's say you just heard some terrible news that a loved one had died. What thoughts raced through your mind? Perhaps you thought that you'd never see them again; or you wished you'd said one last thing; or that you'd spent more time with them. What emotions welled up within you? Did you feel shock at a sudden and unexpected departure? Maybe you felt relief that your loved one was no longer suffering from a painful, debilitating illness. Was your initial reaction followed by sadness? If you felt sad, did your facial muscles contract downward and your lips begin to tremble? Did your abdomen tighten and begin to quiver? Did your eyes start to close at the corners as the tears were released?

You may have chosen a more positive experience, but this is what actors might do to recreate the feeling of sadness, which enables them to cry on demand. This memory process can help you to feel happy, or relaxed, or alert at will.

Every experience is composed of a mix of three things: thought, emotion, and feeling or physical sensation. When an experience is happening live for the first time you typically take it in as a whole, but when you want to memorize something it's easier if you simplify it by focusing on one aspect at a time. That's why when you want to memorize facts you focus on thoughts; to develop habits you focus on behaviors; and to cry on demand you focus on emotion.

Bookmark that Feeling

To achieve relaxation on command you focus on the individual elements that make up the experience of being relaxed.

The first thing to do is to get yourself into a relaxed state. Find a quiet place where you can sit or lay down comfortably without interruptions. Close your eyes and take several breaths. Relax your body as much as you can. Sit quietly for a few moments as the tension releases and your body grows increasingly relaxed. When you're ready, take time to observe the following:

- Notice your breathing as it flows in and out. Are you breathing from your chest, your belly, or both? Notice the pace of your breath. Does your breathing feel comfortable? If not, continue the relaxation process and then check again.
- Notice how your body feels. Mentally scan your body, starting with your feet and gradually work your way up to your head. If you find any tension along the way, breathe into it and relax it further. When you're ready, move onto the next location. When you've scanned your whole body, take note of the overall sensation of feeling relaxed. How do your muscles feel? How does your breath feel?
- Notice your emotional state. What emotion are you experiencing? How are you experiencing it? Are you experiencing more than one emotion at the same time?

Every experience is composed of three things: sensation, thought, and emotion. To memorize it, you focus on each aspect one at a time.

After you've input each aspect, choose a bookmark symbol that's personally meaningful to help you recall the sensation on command.

- Notice your thoughts. What are you thinking about? Has the subject matter changed? Notice the speed of your thinking. Is it faster, slower, or the same? Is it easier, more difficult, or the same?
- Notice your ability to observe things in this moment compared to times when you are not relaxed. Are your powers of observation greater, less, or the same? Do you notice additional detail? Can you see things from a larger perspective?

There are no correct answers to these questions. There are only your own observations, which will help you to remember what being relaxed is like for you.

At each stage, as you observe your breath, your body, your emotion, and your thoughts, with your hand, or in your imagination, touch the spot on your forehead just between and slightly above your eyebrows. As you press gently against your skin, take a deep breath in and out. When you do so, say to yourself "I remember."

This deliberate process helps to set the memory by associating each observation with the physical movements of breathing and touching your forehead. You can use this same motion when you want to recall the observation or thought at a later time. Just take a breath and touch your forehead; as you move your hand away, pull out the memory you're looking for.

To further aid in recall, when you've finished inputting all of your observations think of an overall symbol that you can associate with the composite experience you've just created. This is where you make the mental bookmark that will take you quickly back to the experience.

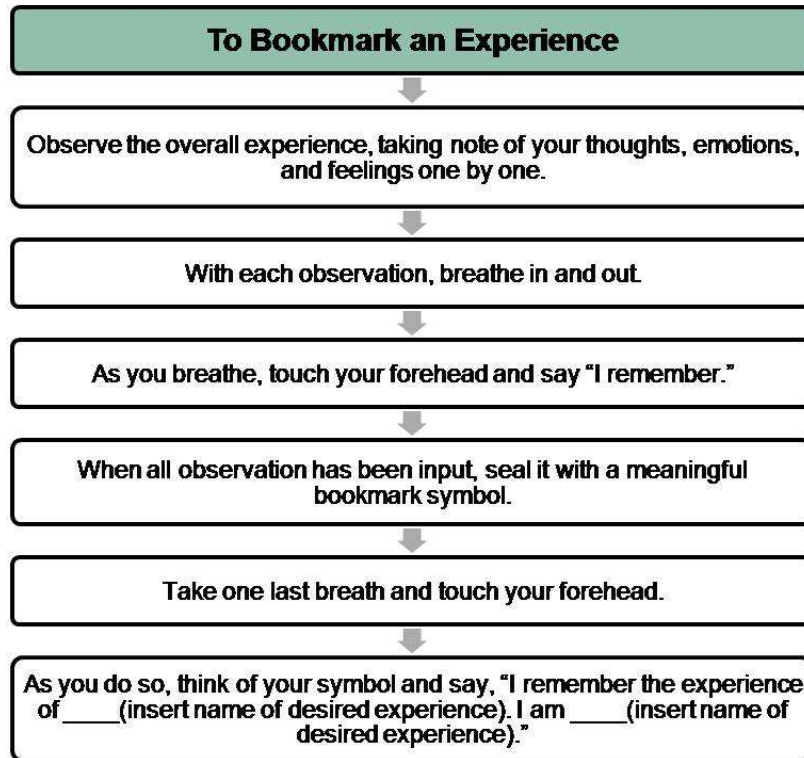

You might choose a word like "peace." Or you might use numbers for different sensations. So "1" might mean energized and alert, "2" might be alert and relaxed, "3" might be relaxed and sleepy, etc. Maybe you'd prefer to use visual images like a rainbow, or full scenes like laying in a hammock under a tree on a summer afternoon. If you collect cookie jars, you might imagine a different one for each sensation. The point is that the symbol you choose should be meaningful to you and help you to bring back the experience on command.

With your symbol in mind, mentally gather all of the separate observations you made into the overall experience of being relaxed. Then touch your forehead one last time. Take a deep breath, think of the symbol, and then say, "I remember being relaxed. I am relaxed."

That's it. You've just bookmarked the experience.

Here's a Quick Summary of the Bookmarking Process

The above sequence outlines the basic steps of creating a mental bookmark. See the main text for additional details.

Recall the Feeling

Setting bookmarks gets easier with repetition. After you've done it a number of times you may find that you can observe your thoughts, emotions, and feelings all at once, making the imprint process faster. The same applies with recall.

To recall the feeling of relaxation you obviously must first recognize the current experience you're having as being one that you'd like to change. As you find yourself in different circumstances, notice how you're feeling in that moment. Perhaps your neck is tight with tension; or you feel nervous butterflies in your stomach; or your mind is racing. These are the sensations that you'd like to release.

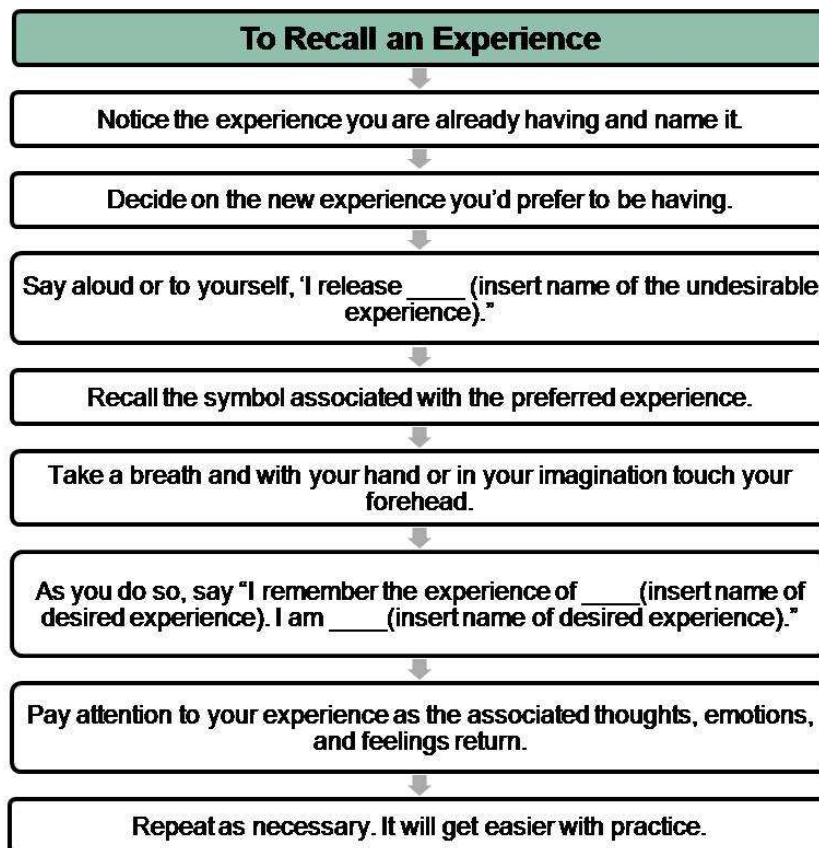

Note and name the various components since it's easier to let go of something you've acknowledged than it is release something that is lurking below your conscious awareness. Gather the new feelings into an overall experience and then say, "I release this nervousness." Or frustration, or impatience, or whatever the feeling may be.

Then recall your symbol for relaxation and the composite experience you have associated with it. Take a breath and touch, or think about touching, your forehead. Say aloud or to yourself “I remember being relaxed. I am relaxed.” As you remember the feeling, it will return.

The feeling may be faint or unstable at first, but just like memorizing the multiplication tables or tying your shoes it will get easier and more natural with repetition. Try the process a few times when you’re not under pressure such as just before you go to sleep at night. If you’re not satisfied with your recall, repeat the steps you used to set the bookmark the first time.

When you begin to get the hang of it, try applying the technique in real life situations. In time, you’ll be able to do it almost effortlessly, just like using a bookmark on your web browser.

Here’s a Quick Summary of the Recall Process

The above steps cover the basic sequence for recalling a mental bookmark. See the main text for additional details.

Oh, What a Glorious Feeling. Oh, What a Wonderful Day.

As I've described the bookmarking process it appears to have multiple steps, but with repeated use you'll find that you can merge them together. I've used this technique for so long that at this point when I decide I want to shift my experience to another state of being I need only think of the new state and take a breath. The rest happens on autopilot, just like brushing my teeth or tying my shoes.

I use my "relaxed and alert" bookmark nearly every day. When work gets a bit stressful and I notice myself tensing up, I breathe my way into a relaxed state. I do the same thing when I find myself in a hurry and facing circumstances beyond my control, like sitting in a taxi cab in traffic when I need to be checking in at the airport.

The most useful application I've found is for public speaking. I used to feel frightfully nervous when I spoke in front of crowds. While repeated practice definitely made things easier, it was not until I thought to use the single breath technique just prior to stepping on stage that all of my apprehension vanished. Now I step in front of audiences with hundreds of people without the slightest twinge of nervousness.

The great thing about this technique is that you can bookmark any state of being, not just feeling relaxed. I've bookmarked the mental state for accessing guidance and the one for meditating beyond time and space. You might find it comes in handy when you're getting drowsy while driving and you want to quickly return to feeling mentally alert, or if you've been flustered by something and you need to "put on a happy face" in front of people to continue your day. You can apply the technique to suit your needs.

Action Plan

1. Start using the single breath technique with a common and practical state like relaxation.
2. Find a quiet time and place to follow the steps for bookmarking and recalling the experience of being relaxed. Try the process several times in a low pressure situation until you get the hang of it.
3. Apply it in real life situations. Practice and adapt it to suit yourself.
4. Choose additional states of being that you'd like ready access to and repeat the process.

That's it. Thanks for spending time with us today.

If you enjoyed this report, please share it with your friends and customers. You can print it, reprint it, email it, or post it on the web. All I ask is 1) that you don't change it in any way, including altering any links.

You can bookmark any state of being. Try it when you're getting drowsy while driving and you want to feel mentally alert, or if you've been flustered and need to quickly get back to feeling normal.

Additional Resources

If you've read through some of our free articles or purchased a product from us in the past, you may want to know about other resources to help you.

As you may have noticed in this report, the format we follow is to present easy-to-understand concepts and simple-to-implement steps. Each of which builds upon the one before in a sequential system, so you can continually advance along your path of self-discovery.

Here's a quick guide to the modular sequence we've developed to help you maximize your skills in the shortest time possible:

1. Awaken your sense of awareness within the present moment.
2. Focus that awareness on the things you choose so you can feel more relaxed, be more productive, and enjoy each moment to its fullest potential.
3. Direct your awareness toward creating the life you desire.
4. Shift your awareness beyond your five senses to access guidance, retrieve information, and interact in realms beyond physical reality.
5. Expand your sense of awareness beyond the limited confines of individuality to encompass your Higher Self.

Awakened Awareness

The first workshop in the Transformation Series, Unwrapping the Present: The Secret to Making the Most of Every Moment, helps you to awaken your internal observer so you can pay Attention to the sensations, thoughts, and feelings you're experiencing in any given moment. This foundational I Am awareness is the primary source of peace and well-being in life, and it serves as the springboard for all that follows.

Focused Awareness

The second module focuses on Meditation. It covers the basics of sit-down meditation, but more importantly you'll learn how to focus your I Am awareness on the fundamental skills of relaxation, concentration, and visualization, all which can be applied with open eyes and in daily life situations, making them essential tools in the creation of your life experience.

Directed Awareness

The Creation workshop examines “The Secret” to manifestation and teaches you to apply the inside-out principle that opens the I Am Toolbox you use to create every experience in your life. You learn to direct your I Am awareness to identify, evaluate, and revise your thought patterns, belief systems, reaction responses, habits, and personality traits that create the outer experiences of your life. With those building blocks in place, you learn when, why, and how you can turn over certain aspects of the creation process to your Higher Self.

Shifted Awareness

The Exploration module teaches you to use your I Am awareness to become aware of things beyond your physical senses through a skill called bilocation—becoming aware of more than one state of being at the same time. You’ll learn how to send your I Am awareness beyond your physical body, enabling you to access the still, small voice of inner guidance, make psychic observations, dip into past lives, and explore the afterlife.

Expanded Awareness

The Realization workshop helps you advance from shifted awareness to expanded awareness. In this module you learn about the two ways to achieve enlightenment—reduction and expansion. The reduction process enables you to merge your I Am awareness and your experience into One. The expansion process enables you to expand your awareness to encompass all that is—which is Unity. I can lead you to both points, but only you can make the final leap into the realization of your Higher Self.

Personal Mentoring

If you don’t feel comfortable sharing your personal experiences in a group or you want to accelerate specific areas of your growth, then consider personal mentoring. This process is an opportunity to work with me privately to help you with your unique interests and challenges as you strive to recognize your essential and inherent completeness, allowing you to stop the relentless seeking and celebrate what you already are in every moment.

---

About the Author

What would you do if you woke up and found yourself floating in midair with your nose pressed against the ceiling?

When it happened to me I thought I was dreaming. I reached out and felt the rough wood ceiling. It felt solid and cool to the touch. So I pushed off it like an astronaut floating inside a space capsule. I drifted backwards a foot or two and simply hovered there.

Then I rolled over in midair and looked around. Light filtered in from a street light outside the window. In its wan glow I could see my night stand with my lamp, notebook, and clock radio. The clock read 2:09.

Up to this point I might have accepted my circumstances as a very vivid dream, but what came next wiped that idea from my mind.

Upon my bed lay a body. My body. Eyes closed. Bare arms resting on top of my down quilt.

I knew immediately that this was no dream.

A Spiraling Journey

That initial spontaneous out of body experience changed my outlook on life. By the time the experience ended a few minutes later I knew there was far more to my existence than I'd previously considered. This new perspective started me on a 20-year spiritual journey of self-discovery that has spiraled back upon itself.

When the journey began I was fully immersed in my life, experiencing my day-to-day existence as a dream without waking. At 2:09 that night I awoke in more ways than one. I grew curious about who I am and why I'm here. I began seeking answers to these questions through direct experience and from teachers who'd traveled the path ahead of me.

I never found a single teacher or a particular path that spoke to me. Instead I treated my journey like an all-you-can eat buffet. I tasted small samples of many things, and heaped my plate with those I liked best. Over time I studied world religions, history, philosophy, and science, skimming the surface of topics like particle physics and delving deep into the practical applications of meditation, prayer, and astral travel.

In time I learned to send my awareness to realms far beyond this physical reality, finally attaining the ability to walk in other realities that are as real and fully-immersive as this one. In those realms I interact with spirit guides, angels, nonphysical friends, and spirits of the "deceased," from whom I've had the privilege of learning as much as I have from my living teachers.

Eventually I came to realize the distinction between teacher and student was not what I thought it was. This sense of commonality propelled my awareness into direct unity with all-things. There are many names for this ecstatic union with the divine, and yet words cannot describe that immersion in light and love.

Despite the all-encompassing nature of that ineffable experience, even this was not the end of my journey. After I learned to access that state of being at will, I had yet another realization—that there is no need for seeking at all. I realized that divine awareness simply is, and our consciousness is its expression.

---

Even more importantly, I realized there is no better way to express yourself than to joyously immerse yourself in the processes of life—just as I'd done so long ago.

Thus my journey has come full circle. And having done so, it's my desire to help you to recognize that you too can be fully immersed in the joyous creation of daily life, while simultaneously enjoying an awareness of your unity with all that is.

I Want to Hear from You

While my spiritual explorations take me far and wide, my favorite stomping grounds are in the Rocky Mountains, just outside my door in Boulder, Colorado, where I live with my wife and two daughters.

At Higher Self Guides we believe Your Success Is Our Destination™. So if you have any questions, comments or suggestions please let me know. I'd love to hear from you.

Email: matthew@higherselfguides.com

Something bug you about this product?
If so, click on the bug to send us an email.
And if we can, we'll take care of it.
We always appreciate your suggestions and comments.

Higher Self Guides, LLC
PO Box 21151, Boulder, CO 80308 USA
Telephone: 1-303-539-9310
Email: matthew@higherselfguides.com
www.higherselfguides.com